Superintendent of Gas made to council on Tuesday night last is much to be regretted, at he has proved a mot efficient, as well as a very laborious official. His resignation will necessitate another examination as the ordinance has two provisions of great importance. First in defining his duties the ordinance says: "He shall have full power to employ and discharge employes," an authority not heretofore, except by inference, given the superintendent. This strange omission appears in all of the ordinances passed the Police Commissioners.

Superintendent of Gas made to council on grating that his son, Mr. James J. McGahey, died this morning from interestication, near Orange, yesterday evening. Mr. McGahey was 24 years old and lived at Burke's station. He was employed by the Southern Railway Company and the southern Railway Company and the waster tanks along the line of that road. While so engaged yesterday evening the Southern Railway Company and the waster tanks along the line of the ordinance says: "He shall have full power to employ and discharge employees," an authority not heretofore, except by inference, given the superintendent of the waster tanks along the line of the ordinances are made to council on the continuous received at Somerest station, mear Orange, yesterday evening.
